PANSY DIVISION

"Wish I'd Taken Pictures" was recorded and mixed in 12 days in November '95, directly on the heels of 7 months of virtually non-stop touring. Accompanying us this time (by last minute chance) was Jim Marcus (formerly of Chicago's Die Warzau). Jim (and Tim Daly, engineer)'s incredible energy helped keep the 15 hour days focused. "Wish I'd Taken Pictures" explores many different sides of the band's personality. From the heavy experiment of "Expiration Date", the country-folk of "The Summer You Let Your Hair Grow Out", the (ahem) ballsy hard rock of "Dick of Death", to the bleak oneness of "The Ache" this is Pansy Division's most fully realized record yet.

Enjoy!

POINTS OF INTEREST:

- Razor's Edge is located in the house where Anne Rice wrote "Interview with the Vampire".
- Votive candles were brought in to 'clear out' some very strange goings on with a mischievous 'unseen force'. At one point, Chris was attacked by a flying speaker!
- Dustin actually slept less than 17 hours a day during the sessions!
- Jon's 'heavy' guitar sound courtesy of an amp loan by a certain famous S.F. 'metal' band.

SLAPSHOT

1. SQUEEZE IT!

Squeeze the tip of the condom to leave space for the cum. Make sure to keep air out of the tip. This is easiest if the dick is fully hard. If the dick is uncut, pull the foreskin back first and put the condom on the same way.

2. ROLL IT ON!

Carefully roll the condom on all the way to the base of the dick.

3. LUBE IT!

Use plenty of "water-based" lubricant all over the condom. Lubes with oil can melt condoms.

4. HOLD ON!

Once you cum, hold onto the base of your dick and pull it out while it is still hard so that no cum leaks out and to be sure the condom doesn't come off inside.

Rarely do we hear detailed descriptions of what actually constitutes safe sex. Our government is afraid to give you this information, lest some bible thumpers are offended. In other words, homophobes are trying to keep you from getting vital information that could possibly save your life. They'd rather see you dead than queer! But this info applies whether you are male, female, gay, straight, bisexual, or unsure and experimenting. A note of caution: these guidelines are based on what we've learned from the first decade of the AIDS epidemic, but research is far from complete, and there are some areas of disagreement. As of February 1996, following these guidelines are your best bet to avoid contracting HIV.

Considered SAFE:

- Mutual masturbation
- Hugging, body rubbing
- Massage
- Social (dry) kissing
- Fantasy, role playing
- Light S&M (no bleeding)
- Unshared sex toys

Considered PROBABLY SAFE:

- Fucking with a condom
- French (wet) kissing
- Sucking (stopping before climax)*
- Cunnilingus*
- Watersports (external only)
- Rimming (oral-anal contact)*
- Fisting using latex gloves

Considered UNSAFE:

- Fucking without a condom • Swallowing semen • Sharing IV needles • Fisting without gloves • Sharing enema equipment or sex toys • Watersports in mouth or on skin with sores or cuts

*These activities pose minimal risk for HIV, but can expose you to other unpleasant sexually transmitted diseases. For rimming or cunnilingus, using dental dams or plastic wrap can reduce risk; for blowjobs, using a condom is effective.

Now that you've seen the safe sex menu, you can make the selections that suit your personal sexual tastes. Have fun and BE SAFE!
